Minister's Foreword

I am delighted to provide the foreword to this valuable support and development tool for youth work. It has taken us some time and much mutual effort and cooperation to see the National Quality Standards Framework (NQSF) for youth work become a reality. The development of the NQSF has involved the active participation of a number of groups and their involvement has been invaluable in the design and development of a framework which I consider is both practical and feasible. The collaborative approach taken and the shared understanding that the primary aim of the NQSF is to ensure and enhance quality youth work provision for the participating young people has, I believe, served to ensure that ultimately the NQSF will improve the effectiveness of youth work service provision.

It is important that we all understand and acknowledge that the NQSF will provide organisations with the opportunity to articulate their youth work practice, as well as providing a structured framework for them to review and assess their work and to assist their continuous development. This will, without doubt, result in an improvement in good practice and in organisations addressing the needs of young people to an even greater extent.

I am sure that all those who have been involved in the process to date – whether in drafting the initial framework, participating in the pilot initiative or in its review and revision – will agree that the time, commitment and energy contributed was time well spent. I wish to acknowledge the willingness of all those involved in the process, which mirrors in many ways the very real commitment in the youth work sector to work and develop in a way that offers the maximum benefit to our young people and to achieve the best return for the investment of resources.

Finally, while the development of the NQSF itself and its principles and standards has been a priority, the most important factor now is for us – my Office, the VECs and national youth work organisations – to collectively ensure successful and meaningful engagement with the process. I appreciate that embedding the NQSF into everyday practice will initially take time, but I believe the rewards will be great for organisations and their services, and most importantly for the young people involved. I know that the youth work sector is committed to engaging in initiatives that will enhance the practice of youth work and, in turn, the learning experiences of young people. My Office shares that commitment and I wish to assure you of my ongoing support and that of my staff in making this process a working reality.

Acknowledgements

The National Quality Standards Framework (NQSF) is the result of significant work and investment by a number of individuals and groups. The Office of the Minister for Children and Youth Affairs (OMCYA) would like to thank the NQSF Working Group and Task Group for their work in developing this framework from start to finish.

In addition, sincere thanks are due to all those who participated in the pilot of the NQSF, including the youth work organisations and projects, the staff, volunteers and young people who participate in these services, and the VEC Youth Officers who were instrumental in introducing the NQSF. A full list of all the people and organisations involved in the creation and testing of this NQSF is given in the Appendix of this document.

Part 1: Introducing the National Quality Standards Framework (NQS)

Background

The youth work sector works with young people outside, yet alongside, the formal education sector. Both the Youth Work Act 2001 and the National Youth Work Development Plan 2003-2007 have provided youth work with clearer definition and direction. Section 3 of the Youth Work Act 2001 defines youth work as:

'a planned programme of education designed for the purpose of aiding and enhancing the personal and social development of young persons through their voluntary participation, and which is complementary to their formal, academic or vocational education and training; and provided primarily by voluntary youth work services'.

This definition highlights four important dimensions of youth work:

- planned;
- educational;
- based on voluntary participation;
- provided primarily by voluntary youth work services.

The continued development and sustainability of youth work requires that these dimensions be identified, demonstrated and developed. The National Quality Standards Framework (NQS) aims to ensure that youth work organisations provide quality services to young people. It also provides an opportunity to articulate their practice through the development of a common language within a structured framework.

The NQS is intended to be both practical and developmental, in that it will enable youth work organisations to assess service provision and to identify areas for development. As engagement in the NQS is a continuous process, it is not expected that all organisations will be able to immediately and fully achieve all the standards as set out in this document. Neither is it the intention that the NQS would require uniformity of provision. Rather, it aims to ensure that youth work providers continue to offer a rich and varied service, and commit to a process of continuous development through engagement in the NQS.

The NQS is primarily a support and development tool for youth work organisations. Self-assessment is fundamental to the process. In addition, there is also an external assessment function, which serves to validate the self-assessment process and which is performed by VEC (Youth/Liaison) Officers for local youth work services or by the NQS Standards Officer for national youth work organisations.

The NQSF will be introduced nationally on a phased and incremental basis, commencing in 2010. Initially, it will only apply to staff-led youth work organisations that receive funding from the following schemes administered by the Office of the Minister for Children and Youth Affairs (OMCYA): Youth Service Grant Scheme (YSGS); Special Projects for Youth (SPY); Youth Information Centres (YICs); and the Young People's Facilities and Services Fund (YPFSF). The implementation of the NQSF will be assisted by VEC (Youth/Liaison) Officers in the case of local services and by a NQSF Standards Officer in the case of national youth work organisations.

Rationale for the NQSF for youth work

The rationale for the development of the NQSF initiative is:

- to provide a support and development tool to youth work organisations providing services to children and young people;
- to establish standards in the practice and provision of youth work;
- to provide an enhanced evidence base for youth work;
- to ensure resources are used effectively in the youth work sector;
- to provide a basis for 'whole organisational assessment'.¹

The NQSF has been developed as a support and development tool to encourage youth organisations to review and assess their work and to assist in the continuous development of their services. It will help in establishing a common – but by no means an exclusive – language of youth work, while also recognising and respecting the diversity of the youth work sector. This is a framework through which to articulate, assess and assure quality youth work.

The NQSF represents a mechanism through which youth work can better demonstrate its effectiveness and continue to improve both provision and practice. It is therefore crucial that the NQSF is flexible enough to work for the setting and service in which it is implemented. Effectively, much of the work being carried out at present within organisations providing services should be compatible with the standards outlined in the NQSF document. If existing standards or quality assurance mechanisms are in place, these too should be transferable to the NQSF. In other words, the NQSF should fit with what is currently happening within organisations – and what is currently happening should fit with the NQSF.

The primary responsibility for ensuring quality lies with the individuals and organisations involved in youth work service provision, while the primary beneficiaries of quality youth work provision should be the young people with whom these services work. The NQSF aims to support organisations to do this.

¹ It is envisaged that the NQSF, once implemented within the youth work sector, will in time represent the foundation for a more comprehensive evaluation in the form of a 'whole organisational assessment' (WOA) to be carried out by the Assessor of Youth Work. The development of this assessment mechanism will relate to both the implementation of the NQSF and to other associated policy developments within the OMCYA.

In implementing the NQSF, organisations are being asked to assess their practice and are also being given the opportunity to identify further indicators and evidence of quality youth work that may exist within their services. This approach of encouraging the identification and feedback of additional evidence will ensure that the ongoing development of the NQSF is responsive to the work of youth work service providers.

Values and core principles underpinning the NQSF

The values underpinning the development and implementation of the NQSF are:

- A clear understanding of youth work's educational purpose, methodology and context.
- Commitment to continual improvement and best practice.
- Transparency of governance and operation.
- Equality and inclusiveness embedded in policy and practice for staff, volunteers and young people.
- Promotion of the young person's well-being by ensuring safe learning environments.

Central to the NQSF are 5 core principles, which are viewed as the essential elements of youth work and are fundamental to the application of the NQSF. They are:

1. Young person-centred: Recognising the rights of young people and holding as central their active and voluntary participation.
2. Committed to ensuring and promoting the safety and well-being of young people.
3. Educational and developmental.
4. Committed to ensuring and promoting equality and inclusiveness in all its dealings with young people and adults.
5. Dedicated to the provision of quality youth work and committed to continuous improvement.

Criteria for engaging in the NQSF

To ensure that the implementation of the NQSF and the support and assessment functions involved in it are carried out in a uniform and transparent manner, a number of criteria have been identified. All those engaged in the NQSF should follow these criteria, which state that engagement in the NQSF should be:

- Young person-centred – that the process is concerned with delivering the best standard of youth work for young people. Young people are central to our work and their needs are paramount.
- Based on partnership and cooperation – that the process will be implemented in a spirit of partnership and cooperation, with clearly defined roles and boundaries and a shared commitment to contributing to a process of ongoing learning.

- Solution-focused – that the manner in which we work will be open, honest and supportive. We will work with integrity towards finding shared solutions to any emerging impediments to the work.
- Challenging and developmental – that we recognise the challenges in implementing the NQSF and are committed to working developmentally.
- Realistic and clear – that we recognise that the expectations and capacity of the various stakeholders are many and varied. We will seek to communicate effectively the purpose, process and outcomes to all concerned in a clear and constructive manner.
- Focused on the benefits – that we are convinced that the process will bring considerable benefits to all stakeholders, including young people, management, staff, volunteers and funding providers.

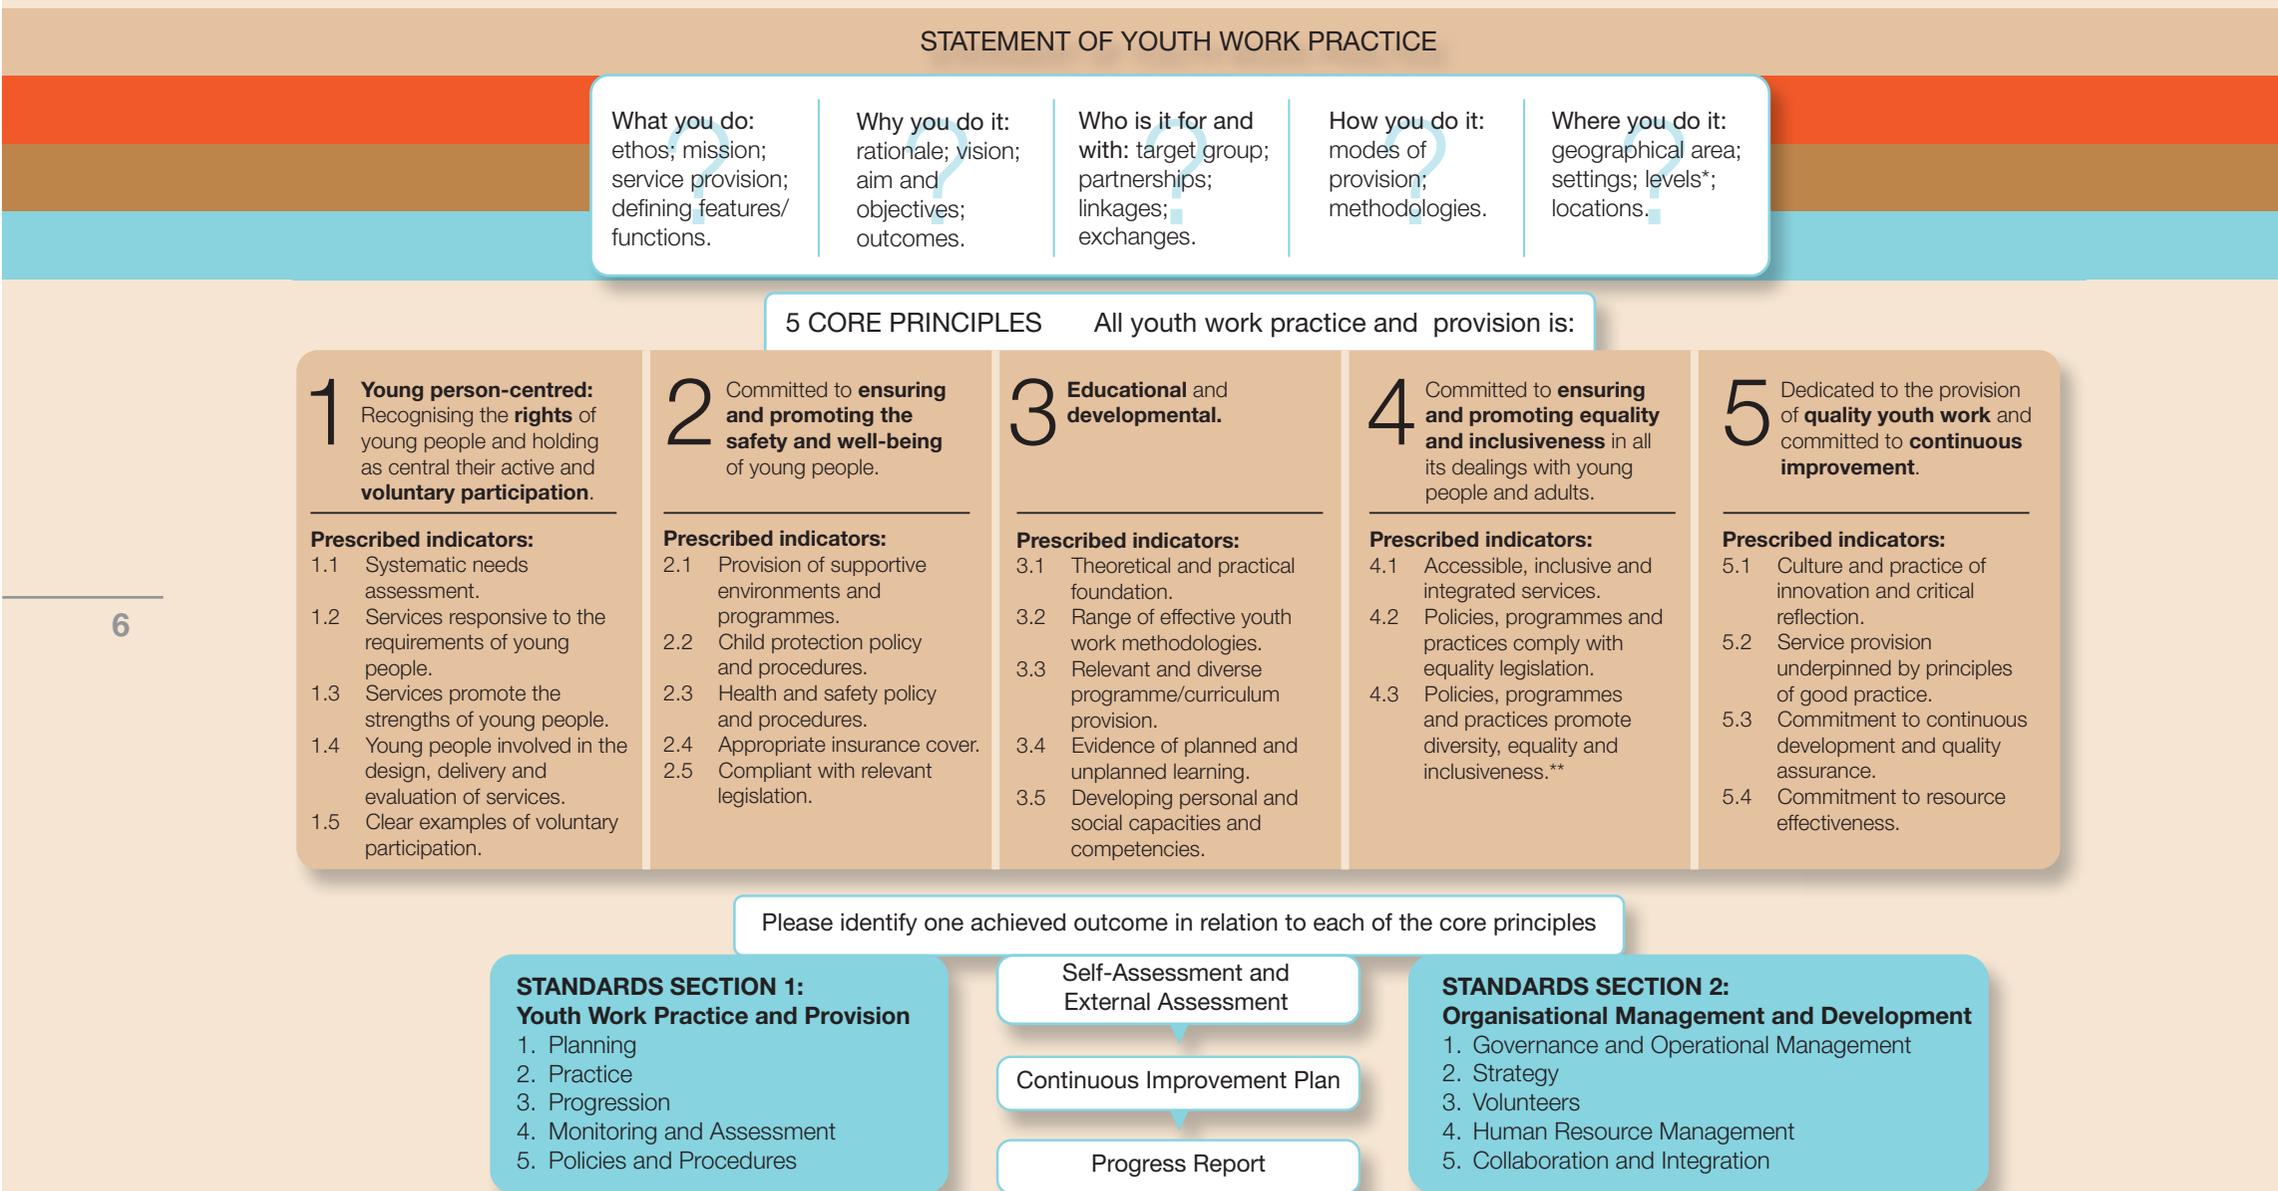

Part 2: The NQSF Process

Overview

The primary function of the NQSF is as a support and development tool, with the aim of assisting youth work organisations to identify strengths and areas for development in their services and to benchmark progress accordingly. Having done so, they will be able to take a structured and developmental approach to the assessment of youth work provision, examining its level, impact and efficacy.

In developing the NQSF, every effort has been made to ensure that it is balanced and proportionate in that it attempts to indicate evidence-based practice, but also to illustrate practice-based evidence. Fundamental to the effective application of the NQSF is the process of self-assessment. This should be based on exploring, negotiating and identifying the position and progress of the organisation and its services in relation to the essential elements of the NQSF, i.e. the 5 core principles, the 10 standards and their associated prescribed indicators (see Figure 1). The purpose of self-assessment is to determine the current status of the organisation and to assess future progress against this position. The organisation will liaise with VEC Officers at local level and the NQSF Standards Officer at national level. These officers will provide both a support function (offering guidance on the implementation of the NQSF) and an external assessment function (validating the organisation's self-assessment process).

* The term 'levels' should be taken to mean the levels at which your organisation operates, e.g. local, regional, national and international.

 Equality and inclusiveness: The Equal Status Act 2000 prohibits discrimination on the following grounds: gender, marital status, family status, sexual orientation, religion, age (not including people under 18), disability, race (including colour, nationality and ethnic or national origin) and membership of the Traveller community.

Timeline for the NQSF

Ensuring quality service provision takes time to achieve. It is difficult to definitively state the time commitment that will be involved in the implementation of the NQSF. This depends on a number of factors, such as:

- the stage of organisational development of the organisation;
- the existence of quality assurance processes within the organisation;
- the level of organisational support within the organisation and the culture of monitoring, review and evaluation in place.

The NQSF will be implemented on a 3-yearly cycle within each youth organisation (see Figure 2). In Year 1 of implementation, the full self-assessment and external assessment processes will take place. In Years 2 and 3, organisations will be required to continue to self-assess, to progress the actions outlined in their Continuous Improvement Plan (CIP) and to complete their Progress Report in consultation with the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer. Following Year 3, the cycle of implementation of the NQSF will come full circle and the organisation will be required to recommence the NQSF process, as in Year 1.

As a guideline, in Year 1 of implementation, the NQSF will involve a commitment of approximately one day per month. Central to this will be the work involved in the NQSF Implementation Team. It is recommended that each organisation establish a NQSF Implementation Team, the function of which is to lead the implementation of the NQSF and to ensure that progress is made in the ongoing process of continuous development. It should also be noted that outside of the structured meetings of the Implementation Team, work will also need to be progressed at an individual level. This parallel process will ensure that progress is being made in addressing the identified areas for development.

Ideally, the NQSF should be used to support what is currently happening in organisations and their services. It can be used as a framework and reference point for team meetings, service reviews, operational and strategic planning events and, where appropriate, to inform reporting requirements. If there are existing structures within the organisation that are deemed effective, these could be tasked with implementing the NQSF. Therefore, rather than the creation of new structures and tasks, what may be required is a restructuring and refocusing of the work that is already being carried out.

Step-by-step process of the NQSF

Step 1: Meet with VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and establish a NQSF Implementation Team

The VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer will perform a dual function, in providing support and guidance in addition to carrying out an external assessment function. The performance of these functions will adhere to the criteria for engaging in the NQSF as outlined in Part 1. The VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer will introduce the NQSF on a phased basis and provide support to local youth services/national youth work organisations either individually or in cluster groups, depending on the configuration of services and the capacity of the officer concerned. This support will focus on facilitating the organisation in making optimal use of the NQSF as a support and development tool.

Scheduled meetings will be arranged between the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and the NQSF Implementation Team (see below). Each meeting will focus on specific and sequential tasks to be progressed in the NQSF (as summarised in Figure 2). Central to this will be examining the evidence in place in support of the core principles and standards, and exploring the position assigned on the scale of attainment during the self-assessment process. In advance of these meetings, the organisation will carry out a number of actions which will then form the basis for the next meeting. Feedback and guidance will be provided to the Implementation Team during this process by the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer. Following each meeting, it should be clear that incremental progress is being achieved in relation to the NQSF.

Establishing a NQSF Implementation Team

To ensure the effective implementation of the NQSF, it is recommended that an Implementation Team is established so as to ensure that appropriate support and expertise is in place to guide and implement the NQSF within the organisation. The Implementation Team should be led by a paid member of staff, who will liaise with the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer, and should involve personnel with relevant expertise. The team should comprise a minimum of three people and aim to be representative of the stakeholders involved in the organisation, i.e. ideally, this should include participation by the staff, board of management and young people. Consideration should also be given to parental involvement, where appropriate.

The Implementation Team is central to the NQSF process and regular structured meetings should be held to examine the position and progress of the organisation in relation to the NQSF. This forum will provide an opportunity to examine and apply the standards, to audit and assess existing service provision, and to plan for ongoing development. It should also promote the NQSF among the wider organisation. It is essential that a participatory approach is followed in the work of the team, with each member being afforded the time and opportunity to engage with the issues under discussion. It is also recommended that identified tasks are delegated and followed up by individuals with particular expertise in these areas. These individuals do not have to be members of the team, but may be co-opted onto it in order to carry out specific tasks or to progress particular actions.

Step 2: Complete the Statement of Youth Work Practice

The Statement of Youth Work Practice (see Part 3: Section 3.1) should represent a clear and succinct overview of your youth work service provision. Essentially, it outlines:

- What you do: ethos; mission; service provision; defining features/functions.
- Why you do it: rationale; vision; aim and objectives; outcomes.
- Who is it for and with: target group; partnerships; linkages; exchanges.
- How you do it: modes of provision; methodologies.
- Where you do it: geographical area; settings; levels (local, regional, national, international); locations.

This Statement should reference the definition of youth work as outlined in the Youth Work Act 2001 (see Part 1) and indicate how your work relates to the four dimensions described (i.e. planned; educational; based on voluntary participation; and provided primarily by voluntary youth work services). It should also indicate any specific functions or features associated with your youth service or mode of provision. The Statement should be accurate and realistic, be approximately 500 words in length and include the information in the order listed above.

Step 3: Examine the 5 Core Principles – Identify outcomes

The 5 core principles are fundamental to youth work and for the purposes of the NQSF, they should define and direct youth work practice and provision. Youth work organisations should endeavour to present high-quality evidence in support of these principles. This should involve regular monitoring and review of the core principles and the associated supporting evidence.

Each core principle is accompanied by several prescribed indicators that must be in place to support the principle (see Figure 1). In Part 3: Section 3.2, you will be asked to:

- provide evidence in support of these indicators;
- identify an achieved outcome² in support of each core principle.

² To assist in defining what is meant by the term 'outcome', it may be helpful to differentiate between inputs, outputs and outcomes:

Inputs – the resources used to produce the services, e.g. personnel, staff hours, materials and capital.

Outputs – the services or activities produced or delivered.

Outcomes – the actual impact of the services, i.e. the effect of the output in practice.

This will afford organisations the opportunity to formulate their own outcomes in relation to the fundamental aspects of youth work as represented by the core principles. Identifying an outcome linked with the stated core principle will contribute to an enhanced evidence base for youth work.

Step 4: Consider the 10 Standards – Select position on the scale of attainment

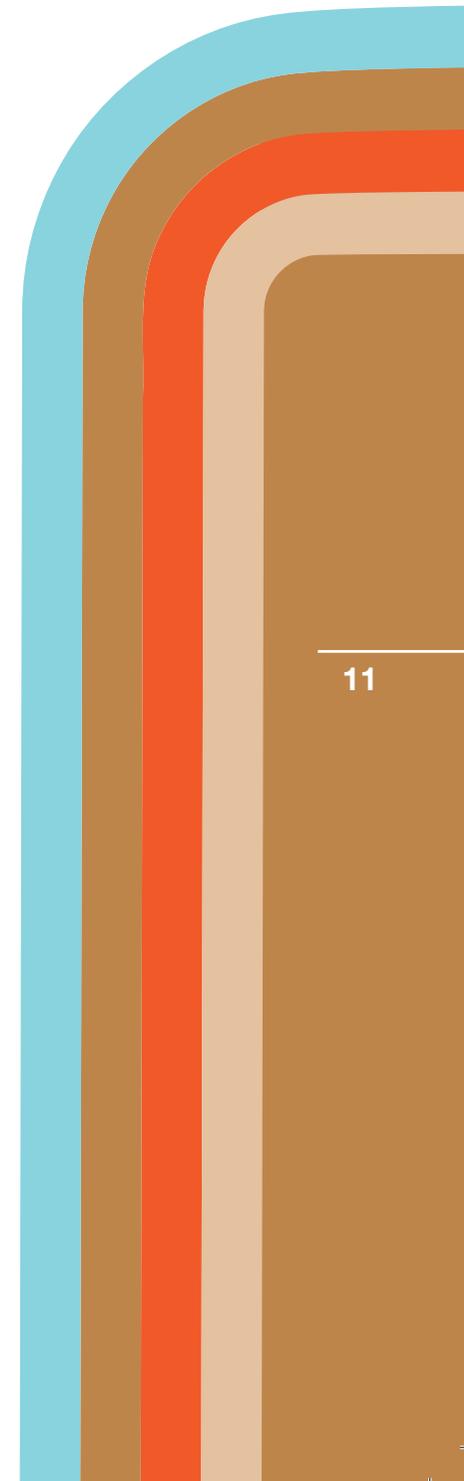

There are 2 sets of standards in the NQSF, with each set comprising 5 standards:

STANDARDS SECTION 1: Youth Work Practice and Provision	STANDARDS SECTION 2: Organisational Management and Development
1. Planning 2. Practice 3. Progression 4. Monitoring and Assessment 5. Policies and Procedures	1. Governance and Operational Management 2. Strategy 3. Volunteers 4. Human Resource Management 5. Collaboration and Integration

Alongside each standard (see Part 3: Sections 3.3.1 – 3.3.10) is a scale of attainment. This is a continuum outlining four different categories or levels of attainment – absent, acquiring, achieved and advanced. Under each of these categories is a list of indicators that should be in place in support of each of the four positions on the scale of attainment.

In considering the individual standard, you will need to:

- Ask the question ‘What is this standard saying?’ Consider each standard and its associated list of indicators under each of the categories. It is important to recognise that most of the standards and indicators should exist at some level, shape or form within your service. While the standards may make sense in theory or as general statements, it is essential that they also apply in practice.
- Examine objectively the activities and areas of service provision that could be considered as evidence of the standard. This should entail an audit of what is in place so that the NQSF Implementation Team takes a balanced and realistic approach to examining the evidence involved. If this approach is followed, it will assist in ensuring that the organisation does not overestimate – or underestimate – the evidence in place.
- Contextualise the standard to your organisation. It may become apparent that you have additional indicators in place in support of the standard; if this is the case, you are encouraged to list these also.

Scale of attainment

The process involved in assigning a position on the scale of attainment is based on self-assessment. Organisations will be required to identify their initial position and over time determine their progress along this continuum. The terms on the scale of attainment are as follows:

Absent	Acquiring	Achieved	Advanced
Evidence is not in place	Evidence is developing	Evidence is developed	Evidence is highly developed and successfully implemented
Not there (if not in place, please indicate the reasons why this is the case and outline how this will be addressed)	Not there yet (committed to achieving and making tangible progress)	Got there (committed to advancing)	Staying there (committed to continuous development)

If, having considered the indicators, you feel that the indicators listed under one of the four categories apply to your organisation, you should take the following steps:

- based on the indicators listed, select a position on the scale of attainment;
- outline why you have chosen that position.

The NQSF is a continuous process. Therefore in the commitment to quality service delivery, there should always be room for improvement. For example, if you have decided that an 'advanced' position on the scale is merited in relation to a standard, your first step should be to ensure you maintain that position and your next step should be to consider how you might improve on this.

Falling between different points on the scale of attainment

In a number of cases, your organisation may be at different points on the scale of attainment in relation to the indicators. For example, some of the indicators under 'acquiring' may apply to you, while you may also have several in the 'advanced' category. If this is the case, consider this collectively within the Implementation Team and select a point on the scale that best reflects your organisation's overall position. There should be sufficient evidence and a clear rationale for the position an organisation assigns itself on the scale.

Step 5: Engage in the external assessment process

The external assessment process (see Part 4: Section 4.1) validates the practical and qualitative aspects of youth work provision. External assessment takes place in Year 1 of implementation of the NQSF – and thereafter, in Year 1 of every 3-year cycle. (In the intervening years, organisations will be required to continue to progress the actions in their Continuous Improvement Plan and to complete a shortened Progress Report in conjunction with the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer.)

To ensure that the NQSF has sufficient regard for youth work practice, three key sources of evidence will form part of the external assessment process – a review of documentary evidence, observations on practice and focus groups with stakeholders (see below). These will indicate support for the achievement of the core principles and standards in the NQSF and provide an opportunity to ensure that the position taken by the organisation on the scale of attainment is validated in practice.

Documentary evidence

The VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer will request to review the documentary evidence cited and will discuss the basis on which the organisation assigns itself a position on the scale of attainment. All evidence will be retained locally by the organisation and will be made available upon request to the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer.

Observations on practice

This aims to provide an opportunity for more practical examples of quality youth work to be observed and, where appropriate, fed back as further indicators, which may, in turn, inform the ongoing development of the NQSF. The VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer will ask to observe a specific area of practice that indicates support for a particular core principle or standard in the NQSF. Examples of practice to be observed should be part of the overall and ongoing programmes offered, and not specifically ‘set up’ for the sole purpose of showcasing practice. The areas of youth work provision to be observed should be considered in relation to the core principle or standard supported and the position taken by the organisation on the scale of attainment.

Focus groups with stakeholders

In assessing the progress of an organisation and its services in the NQSF process, the views of stakeholders (such as staff, management, young people and volunteers) must be taken into account. This input is crucial in providing evidence of quality service delivery and should be carried out through focus groups within the organisation. It is essential that young people are included among these stakeholders so as to ensure that their views, attitudes and experiences are recognised and are regarded as central to the process.

Following the external assessment process, the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer together with the Implementation Team will revisit the scale of attainment and determine if the positions selected on the scale are an accurate reflection of current status in relation to specific standards. This should be discussed between the two parties and the position agreed, or adjusted if required.

Step 6: Complete the Continuous Improvement Plan

The agreed position on the scale of attainment should be the baseline in the Continuous Improvement Plan (CIP) of the organisation and should represent the benchmark for progress and development. The CIP is a strategic summary of the position and progress in relation to the NQSF's 5 Core Principles and 10 Standards. It details the following information (see Part 5: Section 5.1):

- identified areas for improvement;
- identified actions to address these areas;
- identified personnel and timeframe.

The CIP should also inform the completion of the annual Progress Report. Therefore, it is essential that the actions outlined are realistic, achievable, assigned and time-related.

Step 7: Complete NQSF Progress Report

The Progress Report (see Part 6: Sections 6.1 and 6.2) is to be completed and submitted annually, together with Section 3.1 (Statement of Youth Work Practice), via your VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer to the OMCYA in the 4th quarter of each year. It consists of two sections:

- Section 6.1 is based on self-assessment and is completed by the Implementation Team each year.

The following information is required:

1. Organisation information.
2. Core Principles (5) – position and progress.
3. Standards (10) – position and progress.
4. Further actions and emerging issues.
5. Impact and improvement.

- Section 6.2 outlines the external monitoring and assessment, and is completed by the VEC Officer/ NQSF Standards Officer each year. The following information is required:
 1. Date of most recent external assessment.
 2. Commentary on external assessment.
 - Note: Section 4.1 to be included in Year 1 of implementation of the NQSF only and consists of:
 - Documentary evidence.
 - Observations on practice.
 - Focus groups with stakeholders.
 3. Commentary on position taken in the CIP (for Years 1, 2 and 3) and covers:
 - Negotiation with organisations based on CIP and annual Progress Report.
 - Year 3: Review of NQSF Cycle and plan for new NQSF Cycle.
 4. Commentary on progress achieved in implementing the CIP.
 5. Recommended actions to be achieved by next progress review dates.
 6. Additional comments/recommendations.
 7. Scheduled progress review dates.

In Year 1 of implementation and once in every 3-year cycle thereafter, the full Progress Report (i.e. Sections 6.1 and 6.2, including the External Assessment section outlined in Section 4.1) will be completed. In Years 2 and 3, the Progress Report will be shorter since the validation of self-assessment will require that only Section 6.2 (excluding Section 4.1) be completed. This will mean that in Years 2 and 3, the validation of self-assessment will be based on discussions with the organisation on progress, rather than on the full external assessment process as envisaged in Year 1 of the implementation cycle. Within the Progress Report, both the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and the organisation will have agreed the actions to be achieved in the forthcoming year.

Sections 6.1 and 6.2 of the Progress Report – the self-assessment and external assessment sections – should both:

- be clear and concise;
- outline the key points indicating how the work supports the standards (while a degree of narrative is necessary in describing the work, it should be kept brief);
- be constructive, with the fundamental aim of building capacity within the organisation;
- benefit from a collaborative approach. It is essential that such collaboration be viewed favourably, as an opportunity to share and discuss quality work, determine good practice and identify areas for development.

Steps 8 and 9: Continue to update and progress actions in the CIP and complete NQSF Progress Report

As mentioned in Step 7 above, in Years 2 and 3 of the implementation cycle of the NQSF, organisations will not be required to engage in the full external assessment process. In these years, the validation of self-assessment will be based on discussions between the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and the organisation on progress within the NQSF. The organisation will be required to continue to update the Continuous Improvement Plan (CIP) and will also complete an annual NQSF Progress Report, summarising work and progress in the NQSF. The CIP should be completed and agreed in conjunction with the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and be retained locally, while the Progress Report should be submitted to the VEC and OMCYA. The Progress Report, together with the quantitative information outlined in the OMCYA's revised reporting format, is currently all that is required by the OMCYA in terms of reporting. However, the OMCYA may, in certain circumstances, request additional information from the organisation and/or the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer.

Step 10: Review and Plan

This last step refers to the actions required in Year 3, the final year of the NQSF cycle. Essentially, what is required is a repeat of the actions outlined in Year 2. However, in addition to this, the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer and the organisation will review the progress made in the previous 3 years and will commence planning for the next cycle of the NQSF.

Differences of opinion between the Implementation Team and the VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer

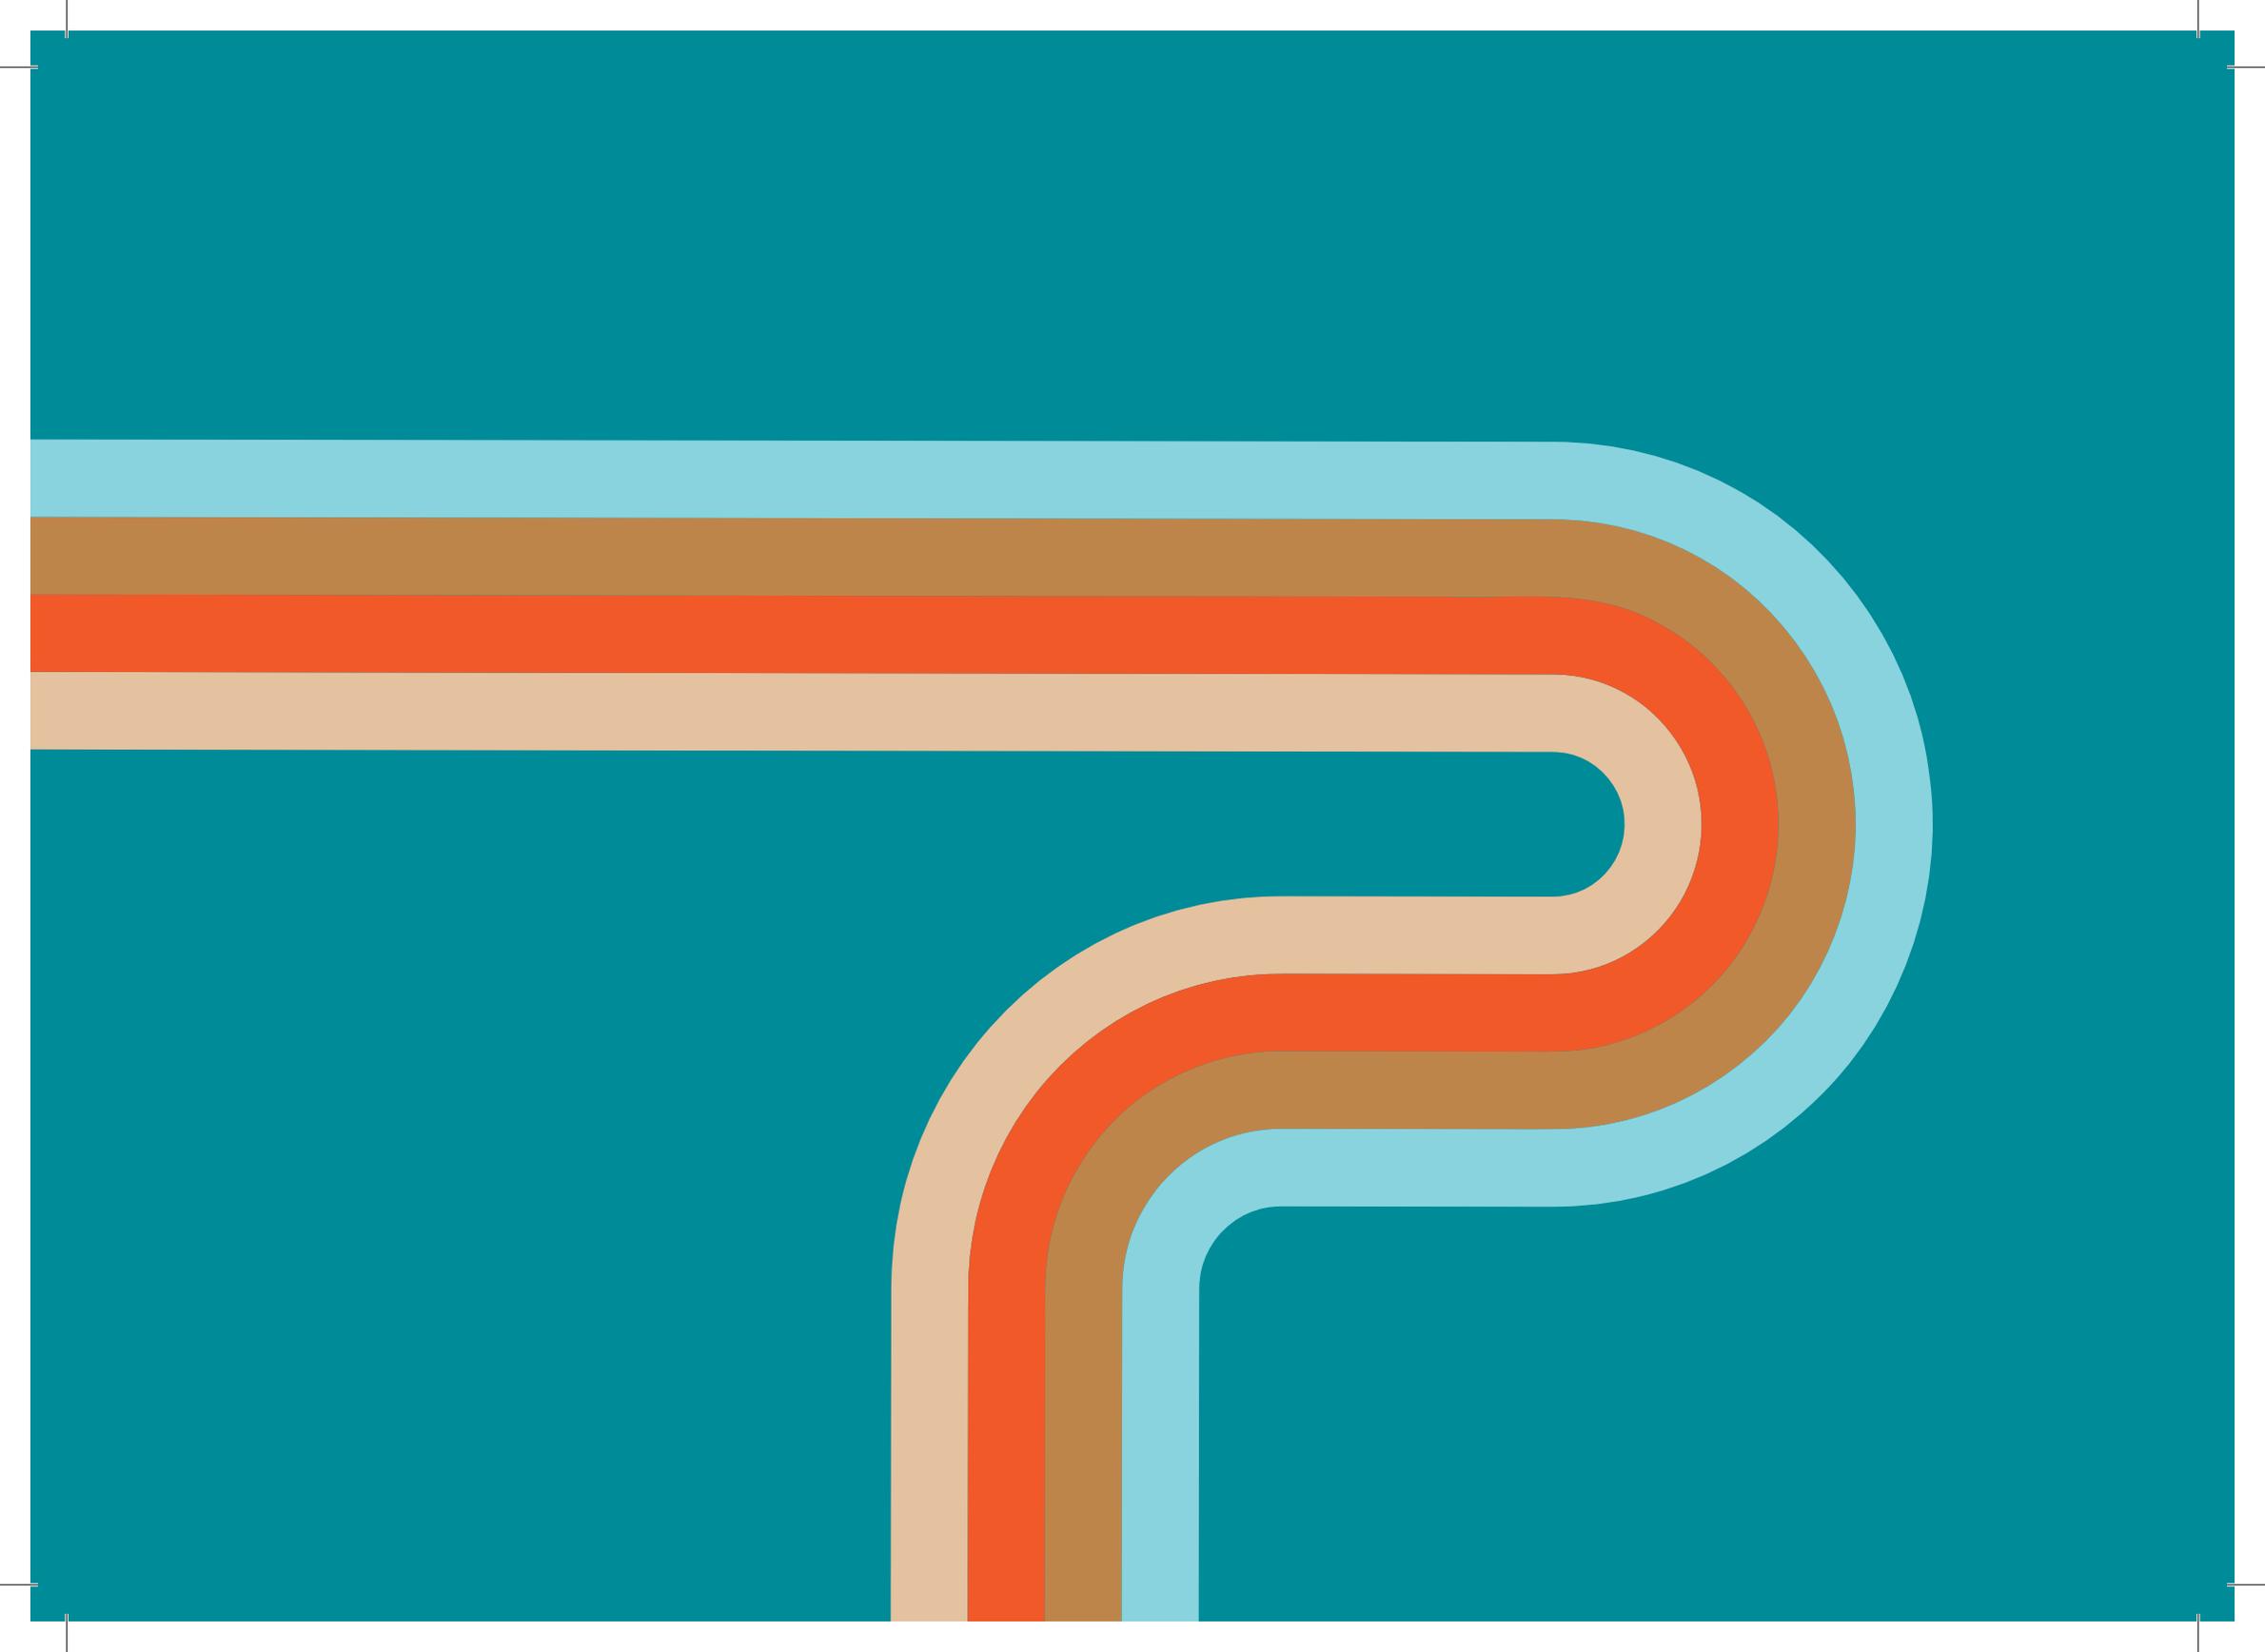

Both the spirit and philosophy of the NQSF underline the importance of collaboration, negotiation and consensus. Therefore, in relation to the NQSF, all issues should be discussed openly and dealt with constructively. However, it should be recognised that situations may arise where there may be a difference of opinion between the organisation and VEC Officer/NQSF Standards Officer regarding the recommendations outlined in the Progress Report. In such instances, it is important that these differences of opinion are acknowledged and recorded, and that every effort is made to resolve the issue and reach a consensus. Arriving at a resolution and consensus position is of crucial importance, provided this does not compromise or adversely affect the position or practice of the organisation, or present a picture of service provision that is at variance with what is in place in practice.

In local youth work organisations where consensus on significant issues cannot be reached by way of the Continuous Improvement Plan or Progress Report within the NQSF, the VEC Officer should consult his or her CEO/line manager to develop a strategy that will engage with the management within the organisation (or, where appropriate, the managing organisation) with a view to ensuring that a resolution is reached. In the case of national youth work organisations, the NQSF Standards Officer should consult the Youth Work Assessor to devise a strategy that will engage directly with the organisation concerned. Such strategies should always aim to resolve the situation locally; however, if necessary, the assistance of outside facilitators may be considered.

Where the assessment process in the NQSF identifies areas of concern that necessitate immediate action within an organisation, addressing these concerns will be part of a separate process outside of the NQSF. In such instances, the management within the organisation, and/or the managing organisation and funding body, will be informed and will assume their responsibility for ensuring effective youth work provision and practice within the organisation.

While it is not anticipated that this would be a common occurrence – and although not the intention of the NQSF – it is essential that due regard is paid to the possibility that the NQSF may, on occasion, identify practices that may be of significant concern and that, if allowed to continue, may compromise the well-being of the young people involved or the viability of the youth work service. An agreed set of standard procedures will be developed to address such matters and it is crucial that these are followed by grant-administering agencies in instances where areas of concern are identified. It is also important that organisations in receipt of funding via grant-administering agencies are aware of the existence of such procedures. This should clarify the remit of the NQSF, outlining when and where a developmental process is to be followed – making clear the boundaries of the NQSF – and indicating the separate and distinct procedures that need to be put in place in situations where a more urgent response to addressing areas of concern is required.

Such standard procedures will be developed by the OMCYA in consultation with youth work interests. These procedures will outline a range of responses proportionate to several potential issues of concern that may be identified and will ensure that any process followed is clearly outlined and consistently applied.

Part 3: Self-Assessment by youth work organisation

3.1 Statement of Youth Work Practice

To be completed and submitted annually, together with Section 6.1 (Progress Report – Self-Assessment), via your VEC Officer/ NQSF Standards Officer to the OMCYA in the 4th quarter of each year.

Please provide a concise account of your youth work practice in relation to the following points:

- What you do: ethos; mission; service provision; defining features/functions.
- Why you do it: rationale; vision; aim and objectives; outcomes.
- Who is it for and with: target group; partnerships; linkages; exchanges.
- How you do it: modes of provision; methodologies.
- Where you do it: geographical area; settings; levels (local, regional, national, international); locations.
